

Orland Park Wants A Kindergarten Turkey Supper, Dec. 18 To Raise Funds

The Orland Community Club is sponsoring a Turkey Supper next Wednesday, December 18, in the Orland Park Public school gym. Serving will begin at 4:30 p.m. and continue until 8:30.

Residents of Orland will be happy to know that this is only the first project which the club will sponsor in order to establish a kindergarten in this community.

Kindergartens have been long recognized as a part of the Chicago school system as well as other large systems. In more recent years even the smallest towns have been rising to the challenge of the kindergartens. In time it will probably be in our state, a required part of all grade schools.

Already the state is encouraging the establishment of kindergartens by offering state aid of 1/2 per grade pupil cost, after the first year of organization. Proposed legislation may increase this aid.

Except for lack of space and funds the board of education would have established the kindergarten in Orland Park this fall. Now they are doing the next best, and are all whole heartedly assisting in community club projects to solve the kindergarten problems.

If the residents support these projects the board will feel justified in incorporating this additional service into their school at the earliest possible moment.

Space, equipment and a trained kindergarten teacher take money. Let us give our preschoolers a good start. Whether you have children or whether you don't you will reap the benefits. A town is as good only as its schools.

Make your slogan next week "From Turkey To Kindergarten." Invite your friends from other towns. You'll have a Turkey dinner with all the trimmings, and you'll be one of the "Charter Helpers" in starting the financial ball rolling for the little folks.

ACP COMMITTEE ELECTIONS

Farmers in Will County should give considerable thought to the approaching annual elections of community and county farmer committees, Mr. Gaskill, Chairman of the County Agricultural Conservation (AAA) Committee, said today.

On Wednesday, December 18, each of the county's 24 farming communities will elect three committeemen and two alternates, as well as a delegate and alternate delegate to the county convention where a three man county committee will be elected. The exact time and places for holding the elections will be announced later.

Mr. Gaskill said that approximately 4,000 farmers are eligible to vote in the elections this year. Eligible farmers are those who are participating in the 1946 Agricultural Conservation Program or the Legume Seed program or the sugar program, or who have a contract with the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation. This includes cooperative owners, operators, tenants and share croppers on farms where these programs are being carried out.

In announcing the coming election, Mr. Gaskill urged that all farmers who are entitled to vote attend their community election meeting. Since the committeemen are responsible for developing, adapting, and administering national farm programs to meet local problems and needs, it is important that the men elected really represent the choice of the majority of farmers in the community.

FIRST SNOW

It appears as though our nice fall weather is at an end, when our first snow of the season came late yesterday afternoon December 12. Up to now, we have been having balmy and warm days and thought our Chamber of Commerce should have said, "Come on up Florida, the weather is fine."

Dedication of Tower Music System In Frankfort Church

Large Crowd At Silver Wedding Event

Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Bettenhausen proprietors of the Bettenhausen Hardware store in Tinley Park entertained their relatives and friends in Saenger Hall in Tinley Park in honor of their 25th wedding anniversary. Over 500 guests were present.

The newly remodeled and decorated hall made a lovely setting for such an occasion. Mr. Harry Yoder of Chicago, friend of the Bettenhausens, was a most efficient master of ceremonies.

A program had been prepared which opened with all singing America after which Rev. J. Frank Anderson, pastor of the Tinley Park Methodist church, offered prayer and spoke very fittingly of the couple and occasion. Several friends had written poems which were read. Henry Bettenhausen, Jr., read a poem he had written entitled "Mother" and his sister, Mrs. Donald Mason, read one she had written, "That's My Mother" Mrs. Wm. Schellhase read a poem Mrs. Walter Brandau composed and Mrs. Fred Stuckey read one she had written. Mrs. Dick Wille Jr., read a fitting toast written by Mrs. Glen Rodgers. Mr. Jean Schwartz of Chicago presided at the piano.

Following the program dancing was enjoyed to the music furnished by the John Koehler orchestra of Tinley Park. Refreshments were served thru out the evening. A three tiered cake with silvered numerals "25" on the top tier centered a table laid with a white linen cloth.

Numerous baskets of flowers were sent to this honored couple and a table contained many nice gifts. It was an evening long to be remembered as everyone was happy and enjoyed a good time.

TO YOU ALL

Our deepest appreciation is extended to our many friends and relatives who thought of us in the celebrating of our 25 years of wedded life. We shall never forget the occasion and will continue to try to make it pleasant for all we contact and know, to the best of our ability.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS WORTH OF CONFIDENCE

Mr. Liberman stated that at no time has his bank refused to permit the use of Reynolds Satinflow Ink on any of the bank records or other permanently retained material.

Mr. Reynolds said that a report from a nationally known research laboratory in Chicago showed that, with the exception of Parker "51", all stand ard inks now used in the United States faded as much or more than the Reynolds Satinflow and that all exceeded US Government requirements. Many of these inks are considered and sold as "permanent" inks.

Reynolds Satinflow tests were made on good quality office second sheet paper such as used for carbon copies. The paper itself completely faded and decomposed on the surface but Reynolds Satinflow ink remained clearly legible. The actual exposure was 1000 times the exposure necessary to develop a severe case of sunburn on the human skin.

On Sunday morning, December 15, St. Peter's Evangelical and Reformed church of Frankfort will dedicate the new Tower Music System and Hearing Aids in the church at the 10:30 A. M. Service with the pastor, Rev. Erich G. Bizer in charge.

This installation is financed thru the Memorial Fund of the church, and will be in memory and in honor of loved ones both dead and living. Memorials and contributions have been received by the church for some time and still are being received. At the Dedication service Sunday, special offerings and gifts will be received for this Memorial fund and later on a printed acknowledgment will be made to the church.

Plans are for regular broadcasts of record music of all types, as well as pick ups from the church organ and choir loft. Thruout the holiday season it is planned to have a daily Christmas Musicale coming to the entire community and conveying the Spirit of Christmas from the church.

The installation has been in progress for several weeks as various parts were received. The installation is in the hands of Mr. Vic. Eisenbrandt, who with his helpers the Mr. Robert Hohenstein, Lewis Ebert and George Sangmeister all of Frankfort, are giving their time and labor gratis.

The system was purchased thru the Sangmeister Electric Sales of Frankfort who graciously sold it at cost price. The system includes a 60 watt amplifier which is the heart of the system. There are 4 trumpets in the church tower. The record machine is in the pastors room where also the records are kept. Hearing Aids will be in the various pews and the microphones will be placed in the chancel. Later we hope to add speakers in the rear of the church as well as in the basement. Special records of chimes and other music will be used.

No Horse And Buggy Days For Retired Frankfort Doctor

Dr. J. L. McEwan of Frankfort who has served this wide area as a Veterinarian for 36 years, sold his practice recently to Dr. F. W. Siefert, and is enjoying a well earned rest.

Dr. McEwan was born and reared at Elburn, Ill. and after he was graduated from the Chicago Veterinary college, he practiced in that city for 4 years. After that he came to Frankfort where he has been since.

In speaking with Dr. McEwan we asked him what some of his outstanding memories were of his 40 years of practice and he said at once, "The grief of the horse and buggy days. With all our good roads and automobiles, I would not go back to those days again." Dr. McEwan owned two horses and often hired extra ones from the livery. He would be gone from home for 4 or 5 days at a time, the old Northwestern telephone with its accommodating operator, always knew where to locate him if he had a call during those days away from home. He would go from one farm call to another which would not permit him to return home after each call as is done today.

Winter time was the worst, and often he was stuck in a snow drift, but as with the U. S. Mail so it was with the doctor, he had to get thru, very often in the middle of night.

In 1913 this was all changed for then it was that Dr. McEwan bought one of those new carriages, an automobile and then he had the work and pain of caring for horses which had been hit by a car.

His many friends wish him many happy years of well earned joy and rest and hope he can see yet many more changes for the better.

Dr. Siefert was born in Dorn, Mich. and was graduated from the Michigan State college and served his two years of internship associated with Dr. W. L. Derrer at Mt. Carroll, Ill. He is 26 years old, married and has moved to Frankfort living in the Jeffries home. His practice is confined to large animals. We hope his practice will be as successful as his predecessor who also came to Frankfort as a young man.

DAUGHTER OF MOKENA WOMAN HAS INTERESTING LIFE IN JAPAN

FIFTH AIR FORCE, NAGOYA, Japan After a 49 day ocean voyage from New York to Japan, via the Panama Canal, Mrs. Eloise Davis Knight, whose parents reside in Mokena, arrived at Yokohama the first week in October. Upon arrival at Yokohama, she travelled by Japanese pullman to Nagoya.

While on the ocean voyage, Mrs. Knight enrolled in a ship's sponsored class which studied Japanese conversation. When the ship, the Wisteria docked at Honolulu, she organized a committee which arranged a Hawaiian "luau" for all the passengers.

Now stationed at Johnson Field, after being processed through Fifth Air Force Headquarters in Nagoya, Mrs. Knight is living the unusual but interesting life of all civilian women employees of the War Department in Japan.

"The 23 civilian women employees at Johnson Field", she said, "are quartered in pre-fabricated huts each but having four bedrooms off one central living room. We eat at the officers mess and consider the food good."

Before the war, Johnson Field was Japan's West Point of the Air. Now it is one of the important bases of the Fifth Air Force, the Occupation Air Force in Japan and Korea. Several theaters show movies every night and the Officers' Club offers bridge and Bingo games regularly. Golf is played extensively at the nearby Kasumigasaki Country Club.

"Since my sister lives in Tokyo," continued Mrs. Knight, "I often take the four hour jeep ride from Johnson Field into Tokyo for the weekend. Both places are interesting but in different ways."

Mrs. Knight is a graduate of the Vero Beach High school, Vero Beach, Fla., and the Florida State College for Women at Tallahassee. She worked at the United States Naval Air Station at Vero Beach as Chief Clerk at the Central Office, registering there for an overseas job in Japan. At present she is employed in the Adjutant General office at Johnson Field.

'STUMP-TO-HOUSE' JOURNEY . . . Virgin timber from Idaho's forests is speeded up on its way to help aid the lumber shortage. Modern methods have cut the transit time materially.

HUNTING A HOUSE?

Foresters Speed Lumber To Fill National Shortage

WNU Features

BOISE, IDAHO.—Idaho's towering forests are playing an important role in the all-out effort to alleviate the nation's lumber shortage. Speed is the keynote in the lumber industry, modern production methods expediting the process of converting virgin timber into sorely-needed houses.

Actually a tree in the forest can be cut, sawed, cured and ready for a house in a matter of weeks, Idaho foresters and lumber company officials insist, although the elapsed time sometimes seems like a century to hordes of hungry house hunters—especially those relegated to living with in-laws.

"Today the product of standing trees can be unloaded at a lumber yard hundreds of miles from the forest in a matter of two or three weeks," foresters report.

Drying Expedited.

Back in the old days when most of the work of lumbering was done by hand, many months were required to produce finished lumber from growing trees. One of the longest delays was in drying or curing of the rough boards before they were sent to the planing mill. In drying yards after the wind and sun and rain had done an unpredictable job of curing, the boards were taken from the piles one by one and inspected, all the work done by hand.

Today the most commonly accepted method of drying lumber is kiln drying where cross ventilation takes out the excess moisture. Other methods sometimes used are chemical drying and high frequency electrical drying. In kilns, drying time will range from 72 hours for Idaho pine "4-by-4s" to 432 hours for "10-by-4s."

Drives Eliminated.

Trucks have supplanted to a large extent the big timber drives and water transportation of the past in Idaho's forests, and other methods and machines have speeded up the "stump-to-house" journey of lumber. Today the time lapse has been shortened from months to days, which should encourage those who still are waiting for lumber for that new house.

The cutting of trees is a year-around operation, even when the snows come. During the war, Idaho timber workers cut trees in snow from 9 to 11 feet deep. Ordinarily, however, they hold their winter operations to areas where snowfall is lighter.

Staid Boston Has Novel High School

BOSTON. — In traditionally staid Boston, a high school where students may leave the building, smoke or occasionally call up their wives now flourishes. Perhaps the only institution of its kind, the Boston School for Veterans has one academic year under its Sam Browne belt and now is embarking on the second.

Germinating from an idea by members of the Boston school committee, this novel veterans-only high school opened its doors December 3, 1945, under the headmastership of former Navy Lt. Comdr. Henry McInerney. All faculty members are veterans.

Students' ages have ranged from 19 to 50. Applicants must live in Boston and have a wartime record. Thus far the student body has been divided equally between those earning diplomas and those taking refresher courses for college.

McInerney, who taught at other Boston public schools before entering the navy, has high praise for his battle-hardened pupils.

Psychology Lauded For Aiding Parolees

RICHMOND, VA. — Modern psychology and case methods are credited by William Shands Meacham, chairman of the Virginia state parole board, with satisfactory restoration to society of more than 90 per cent of Virginia parolees.

Speaking before a convention of trial justices here, Commissioner Meacham described the average man entering prison as between 19 and 25 years of age, not a hardened criminal, who has had seven years or less of schooling and faces a sentence of from three to five years. He has had on an average of four contacts with the law prior to imprisonment.

Modern penological methods used in Virginia penitentiaries, which include service of full-time psychologists and medical psychologists, immediately diagnose the character of the man and a plan for his paroled condition goes forward while he still is in prison, Meacham explained. Results of psychological tests are used as basis for assignment to prison duties.

FOR THE 'WELL DRESSED' G. I. . . Seventy items costing $1,200 are included in the new Arctic fighting garb for Uncle Sam's winter soldiers. The new outfit was displayed at the army ground forces' "Task Force Frost" at Camp McCoy, Wis. Shown examining the clothes and equipment, a total of 70 items, are Capt. David E. Cleary of Detroit and Pfc William G. Kreuzer of Pittsburgh.

'Divide Game' Hunts Popular in South

JACKSONVILLE, N. C. — "Divide-the-game" hunts have lured many sportsmen to nearby Hofmann forest this season. The novel hunts, which opened in November, are continuing at specified dates in December and will wind up on New Year's Day.

In the novel hunting procedure, each participant is given a "hunter's share" of the kill. In the case of a deer kill, the successful marksman also gets the head and hide. Heavy kills have been reported of deer, bear, quail, squirrel, fox, rabbit, turkey, raccoon and opossum. Use of rifles is discouraged because of the large number of hunters in the field, shotguns being recommended.

The Hofmann forest is part of the extensive North Carolina state college forest area. Hunting is barred where cattle range.

Reinstating Insurance

Because of the many inquiries concerning lapse of National Service Life Insurance policies and their reinstatement provisions, here are given steps for such reinstatement:

National Service Life Insurance, which has lapsed because of failure to pay a premium within the grace period of 31 days from the due date and which has not been surrendered for its cash value, may be reinstated in accordance with regulations upon written application signed by the applicant and, except as provided as to level premium term, upon payment of all monthly premiums in arrears with interest from their several due dates at the rate of 5 per cent, compounded annually, and upon submission of evidence of insurability satisfactory to Veterans' administration. Any National Life Insurance on the level premium term plan which has lapsed may be reinstated within the term upon written application, payment of two monthly premiums and evidence satisfactory to the VA that the applicant is in good health. If application is made within six months after date of lapse or within six months after August 1, 1946, whichever is later, reinstatement may be effected upon payment of two monthly premiums if the applicant is in as good health on the date of application and tender of premiums as he was on the due date of the premium in default.

The insurance act of 1946 provides that in any case in which application for reinstatement of National Service Life Insurance is made prior to January 1, 1950, the fact that the applicant is in good health will not be denied because of any disability or disabilities, less than total in degree, resulting from or aggravated by active service.

Questions and Answers

Q. My brother enlisted in the army September 14, 1942. He was in the ordnance department and went overseas in September, 1943, served in India and then China until June, 1946. While overseas he got into trouble July 29, 1945, and he was held in the guard house and court martialled. His sentence was life in prison. He was brought back to the states in June, 1946, to serve his time in Leavenworth prison. Is there any way we can get him back in the army? He is the only one to support my mother.—L. S., Seattle, Wash.

A. The army has set up a rehabilitation program under which men convicted of crime while in the armed services may win their way back into good standing in the army and society. Generally speaking, however, this is a long process and a veteran must prove his ability and his willingness to win his freedom. However, apparently your brother is guilty of a serious crime and, as we do not know the circumstances, it would be difficult to determine his status. There is apparently nothing you can do about it. If he is in line for the rehabilitation program, the army will institute the steps he must follow until his case can be reviewed by army officials and finally by the President.

Q. I have a girl friend in England and she has a baby by me. We were to be married before I came home, but never were. The baby is 6½ months old. I would like to know if she can come to the United States to me. If so, can she come at government expense? If she cannot, how much will it cost her to come on her own expense?—G. B. M., Dalton, Ga.

A. This is a case which must be decided on its individual merits. The army in some instances has recognized illegitimate children. You should submit your case to the Office of the Adjutant General, War Department, Washington 25, D. C., for a ruling.

Q. I am a soldier. I re-enlisted in the army 10 months ago. I am married and my wife is expecting a child. Is my wife entitled to get hospital care paid by the government? — A soldier, Woodville, Ala.

A. If you are an enlisted man in the first three grades, your wife is entitled to medical care in maternity cases. You should consult your commanding officer for details.

Q. I was in the army four months and I was discharged under Section II, circular 397, war department, 1942. How does this law read or what benefits would I be entitled to under the G.I. bill of rights?—L. C. R., Thorpe, Wis.

A. Section II of the army regulations pertains to minors who have obtained admission into the army by falsely giving their age or without the proper consent of their parents. I believe, however, that you are entitled to provisions of the G.I. bill, but you should consult your nearest Veterans' administration.

Snow—the "double-crosser"

You can't trust snow. It might have ice under it. And that means trouble—fast! Thousands of destructive accidents each winter could have been prevented by WEED TIRE CHAINS.

For treacherous going, there's no better safeguard than WEEDS. Especially the new WEED AMERICAN V Bar-Reinforced TIRE CHAIN. More than a new tire chain—the new idea in traction.

Don't let winter catch you without tire chains. See the dealer who handles WEED CHAINS.

The trio, Mrs. Carlton Cole, Mrs. Herbert Duerr and Mrs. Edward Selvert sang two Christmas selections accompanied by Mrs. Howard Ayres. The society will serve lunch at the Wm. Fitzer sale Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Arvid Swanson in charge. The president, Mrs. Albert Schumli announced the Good Will truck will be in town for pick up, the latter part of the month and those having articles for the Good Will Industries are to take them to the home of Mrs. Joseph Ingraham. A New Year's Eve Watch party will be held in the church and Mrs. Joseph Ingraham, Mrs. Chas. Werner and Mrs. Arvid Swanson were appointed to the refreshment committee. The next meeting will be held January 8 in the church and Miss Dorothy Jones of Joliet will be the guest speaker.

Dessert-coffee will be served at 1:30 by the officers of the society. The worship and song services were in charge of Mrs. Maynard Brockman and Mrs. Duerr led the group in singing.

Mrs. Norman Peterson was the guest speaker and she gave a review of "The Other Wise Man." This was followed by a 50c Christmas gift exchange. Refreshments were served from a lace covered table decorated with Christmas candles and evergreen. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Walter Hamilton and Mrs. Dean Bright.

The Methodist church board met on Friday night following the Family Night Supper held in the church dining room at 6:30. President Rev. Ralph Miller presided. Plans were made to install a new furnace as soon as work can be started.

WING TIPS. Piper Aircraft Corp. completed its transition to production of the new "Super Cruiser" 3 place plane during November, and production of about 600 a month of these planes is expected soon. The Cruiser, which sells for $3,295, can carry the pilot, two passengers and an adequate gasoline supply on 500 to 600 mile non stop hops.

Dr. Alexander Lippisch, one of Germany's leading scientists and former chief designer for the Messerschmitt Aircraft Works, predicts one hour flights from New York City to the Pacific Coast in a supersonic (faster than sound) plane, and at a cost of only $75. Dr. Lippisch asserts the supersonic plane will be easier and cheaper to build and maintain, and will attain economical speeds of 2000 miles per hour. Dr. Lippisch is one of the 86 German scientists who volunteered to continue their experiments in the United States under contract to the Army Air Forces.

Check Points: More complete weather service for the Private Pilot is the object of an experiment the Weather Bureau is planning to conduct over commercial broadcast stations and net works in the near future, thru out the Middle West and Rocky Mountain areas. Names of the stations, wave lengths, and time of broadcasts will be announced by the Weather Bureau at a later date. Air passengers making their initial flights aboard United Air Lines Mainliners may now receive "First Flight" logs signed by the flight crew. The AAF Air Material Command announces new military aircraft orders totaling more than $25 million were recently awarded to Republic Aviation Corp. cumulative orders calling for production of more than 500 new jet fighters.

CIVIL AIR PATROL. Lt. Col. Gordon DaCosta, Commander of the Illinois Wing, announces Capt. Jay Chnstein of Chicago has been appointed Wing Staff Supply and Equipment Officer, and Lt. G. Oda Nagle is the new Chicago Heights Squadron Commander. "Operation Roger" is a program designed by the AAF to maintain current addresses of ex-AAF servicemen. Postcards are being distributed thru out the country to encourage veterans to send their names and addresses to AAF Headquarters, Washington 25, D. C.

CONGRESS UP IN THE AIR? The Congressional Pilots Association has been organized for members of Congress who are serious about learning to fly! Well!

The Chicago Stockyards is the largest single live animal market in the world.

single live animal market in the world. The products of the fertile upper Mississippi prairies and livestock from the western ranges gravitate naturally to the nation's transportation center, creating here the focal point of food processing—one of America's most important and largest industries.

Chicago's preeminence in this industry has placed it first in the production of fresh beef, mutton, lamb, pork, cooked hams, fresh and dried sausage, lard and oleomargarine.

Because the Middle West is the nation's granary, Chicago and Northern Illinois is a huge grain distributing center. The Chicago Board of Trade handles 86 per cent of the entire nation's trading in wheat, corn, oats, rye, barley and soy bean futures—the largest market of its kind in the world.

With its ideal economic balance among industries, trades, and agriculture, this area is indeed the heart of the world's richest inland empire.

The same natural advantages that have contributed to its importance in food processing have helped to build its leadership in industry, transportation, and marketing. No other center provides such easy access to as many other large markets. No other distributing point offers such economy of time and distance in serving the nation—and the entire world.

These are some of the reasons why this area is well launched upon another period of industrial progress. For industries contemplating location or expansion, the unequalled advantages of this diversified area deserve thorough investigation.

Chicago and Northern Illinois

...Center of an Agricultural Empire

It was inevitable that Chicago should become a world food center. Here in Northern Illinois a billion dollars worth of food products are processed annually. Here, a hundred thousand people are employed in this industry alone.

Forty per cent of America's farm output, in dollar value, is produced in—or within overnight ride of—Northern Illinois. Thus Chicago has become the largest packing and food storage center, as well as the largest Industries located in this area have these outstanding advantages: Railroad Center of the United States • World Airport • Inland Waterways • Geographical Center of U. S. Population • Great Financial Center • The "Great Central Market" • Food Producing and Processing Center • Leader in Iron and Steel Manufacturing • Good Labor Relations Record • 2,500,000 Kilowatts of Power • Tremendous Coal Reserves • Good Government • Good Living • Good Services for Tax Dollars.

To keep shoe string potatoes crispy, don't salt them until you are just ready to serve.

Do not let kitchen cutlery stand in water. Wash blades first; if stained use scouring powder. Then wash handles. Rinse and dry immediately.

If you wipe spots off the floor as they appear, it will not be necessary to wash the entire floor so often.

Standing uses eight per cent more energy than sitting. Surprise you? Now maybe you will sit to peel potatoes, shell peas, polish silver and the like.

If you're weeping over the worn-out print dress, take heart! If the blouse isn't too worn, cut it off, remove the sleeves and bind them. Then wear it like a dickey or as a gilet under your favorite suit.

Use cuffs from men's old shirts for making shoulder pads. They're very nice for wash frocks, giving the necessary build-up, without too much bulge.

SOLDIER OF ALL TRADES

THE Army Ground Forces man is versatile. He can go anywhere, in every conceivable type of conveyance, doing any one of over 200 jobs. His versatility is vital to us all, for in his hands lies the power for peace.

The Ground Forces soldier is a man of action. He walks, drives tanks, rides on ships and speedboats, skis, clambers up challenging mountain peaks, drops through clouds from high-flying aircraft.

Everywhere he's surrounded by the safest and most up-to-date equipment technical skill can devise. Because he is in good hands, the American people are in good hands. Because he has volunteered for this stimulating career, he will be happier and the prestige of his job will stand out around the world.

YOUR REGULAR ARMY SERVES
THE NATION AND MANKIND IN WAR AND PEACE

SWISS CRASH HERO . . . Brig. Gen. Ralph Tate Sr., is shown with his son, Capt. Ralph Tate Jr., after the latter had been brought to Meiringen, Switzerland, by one of the Swiss rescue planes. Captain Tate was pilot of the plane that crashed on the rugged glacier. His mother was one of the passengers. Airmen say that the captain's feat of crash-landing the plane on the rugged glacier without loss of life was remarkable.

KILROY WON STREETCAR . . . Winner of a contest sponsored by American Transit association with letter on subject, "Kilroy Was Here," James Kilroy, Halifax, Mass., his wife and nine children take over their prize—a streetcar. The car will be moved from the Boston elevated yards to Halifax, where the Kilroys will remodel and use it for an addition to their present home. The youngsters claim it will make an ideal play room.

OUTPLAYING TRUMAN . . . Tommy may lack the experience of President Truman as a piano player, and his twin sister, Kathy, may not be a Helen Morgan, but they demonstrate their technique. Their father is Reid W. McGibbeny, industrial arts teacher in Crafton, Pa., high school. When the twins were born they were not expected to live, but now the husky pair provides their 85-pound mother, Mrs. Dorothy McGibbeny, 21, with plenty of excitement, including their piano duet.

BUSINESS BY TELEVISION . . . A legally binding contract was signed simultaneously by executives of Dumont television laboratory, New York City, and motor company in Washington, D. C., as both contracting parties saw and heard each other by means of television. It was the first time that this newest medium of communication has been used to consummate a business agreement.

FFA RECEIVES GIFT . . . Gus R. Douglass Jr., 19, of Grimms Landing, W. Va., president of Future Farmers of America, looks on as John E. Kraft, president of Kraft Foods company, signs $5,000 check for the FFA foundation. The foundation sponsors various awards and prizes throughout the nation.

JOINS 'BIG FOUR' . . . M. de Saint Hardouin, French ambassador to the U. S., who recently arrived in Washington.

SURPRISE! . . . Stan Miasek, Falcons' center, is not the only basketballer that has been surprised this year. As the elusive ball bounces on its merry way the Detroit player looks with a forlorn expression at New York player.

INVESTIGATE FEDERAL WORKERS . . . A. Devitt Vanech, special assistant to Attorney General Clark, who will head the President's commission to purge the government of disloyal or subversive employees.

HEADLINER . . . John L. Lewis, president of United Mine Workers, shown as he arrived in Washington to accept service of federal court order on recent contempt order. Most labor leaders backed Lewis' stand during trial.

PHILEMON: A LETTER ON CHRISTIAN BROTHERHOOD

LESSON TEXT—Philemon 4-20.
MEMORY SELECTION—Now the Lord is that Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.—II Corinthians 3:17.

Christian brotherhood! That may not sound like a dynamic influence destined to change the world, but that is just what it has done. We study today a letter written about a slave boy at a time when slavery was accepted as right, but it stated principles of Christian consideration and brotherly love which were eventually to overthrow slavery. It is still at work today when and where we let it!

This letter, written by Paul and yet by the Holy Spirit, personal and yet eternal and spiritual in its application, is a model of letter writing, and equally a model of Christian brotherhood. It concerns one Onesimus, a slave who had deserted his master and probably defrauded him (v. 18). He had been converted and now was being sent back to his master.

I. "I Might Be Bold—Yet I Rather Beseech Thee" (vv. 4-9).

After a fine spiritual salutation (vv. 1-3), Paul enters upon an appeal to Philemon which is a model of tact and courtesy.

First he lets Philemon know of his prayerful interest in him. Paul had been praying for him, that's why he could say such a helpful word.

Then he recognizes Philemon's goodness and his effective testimony for Christ. This was an excellent approach to the making of a request, and be sure that it was not empty or hypocritical flattery. We do well to recognize the fine qualities of our Christian brother, and we could profitably speak of them more than we do.

Then Paul was ready to make his request. See how nicely he does it. He skillfully reminds Philemon that he (Paul) might make some demands, and especially in view of his age and his imprisonment. But he will not do so; rather he says, "I beseech thee."

II. "Without Thy Mind I Would Do Nothing" (vv. 10-16).

Paul, the aged prisoner, had found in his new convert, Onesimus, a real helper. He would have liked to keep him. In fact, says he to Philemon, Onesimus could do for me the things you would want to do if you were here (v. 13).

Paul could have felt sure of the willingness of Philemon. He could have assumed that the request would be granted. And in any case, Philemon did not even know where Onesimus was, so why not keep him? He did not reason thus.

True Christian consideration respects the personal rights and the property rights of another. We must not assume, or demand, or put pressure on anyone (v. 14) to get what they have or to draw out their service.

Another expression of consideration is found in verses 15 and 16. Philemon had lost a heathen slave, now he is receiving back a Christian brother. No worker will give less in service, and no master will demand more, because both are Christians.

Now Paul touches on one of the finest elements involved in Christian brotherhood, namely, co-operation. We are to live and labor together for a common cause. Pleading for his friend and brother, the young slave Onesimus, he says:

III. "If Thou Count Me a Partner, Receive Him" (vv. 17-21).

Partners share the benefits and the burdens of their joint enterprise. Partners in the gospel, like Paul and Philemon, shared not only spiritual blessings, but also the responsibilities. Paul was presenting such an item to Philemon in the return of Onesimus. Something had to be done about the debt of Onesimus, his failure as a servant. Paul says, "Charge it to me, your partner."

It has been pointed out that there is here a blessed example of the important doctrine of imputation, which is the "act of God whereby he accounts righteousness to the believer in Christ," because he "has borne the believer's sins in vindication of the law." So we note that verses 17 and 18 perfectly illustrate imputation.

Paul's promise, "I will repay it" (v. 19), was the legal phraseology of a promissory note in his day. It was a bonafide partisanship transaction, yet it was coupled with a reminder of indebtedness. Everything Philemon had and was he owed to Paul; but, says the latter, "I will not speak of that now."

No right-thinking person is content always to be on the receiving end. The humblest recipient of favor or the smallest child who feels the love of another wants to respond. The considerate friend will, therefore, not always insist on giving, but will graciously (like Paul) open the way for co-operation, for partnership.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nationwide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor.

DOAN'S PILLS

LAST LOVER

BY Helen Joffe Miller

Julia (Dooley) McFarlane's husband, Richard, disappeared in World War I, leaving her with two children. She and her father-in-law, John I. McFarlane, have tried in vain to find some trace of Richard, either dead or alive. Twenty-five years later Ric is 27 and serving in the army of World War II while Jill, 26, professes an interest in Spang Gordon, a young lieutenant. Julia still clings to the belief that Richard may yet be alive and refuses to have him declared legally dead. Her greatest worry is that her daughter might marry Spang, thus becoming an army wife, subject to the same grief she has endured for a quarter of a century without word of Richard.

CHAPTER II

Julia twisted her hands together. "John I," she began abruptly, "Ric didn't have a furlough when he came home. He traded for some other man's pass. Jill told me."

The old man's mustache twitched. "I suppose if they put him in the guard-house you'd send him a fruit-cake with a file in it!"

"If they put him in the guard-house his chances for a commission are gone."

"Might be a good thing. Being a buck private might be good for him." He stood up, glared down at her fiercely. "Dooley, you spoiled that boy!"

"I know," Julia said heavily, "but he was—all I had! He needed me. Jill didn't. She was always self-sufficient, like you."

"She's a McFarlane. The McFarlanes stand on their own feet. But that young Richard—he's another."

"Don't say it, John I." Julia begged, pain in her eyes. "We've put that bitterness away. Don't let it come alive again."

"But it is coming alive again, whether you want it or not. I've seen it for years. I warned you that that boy was growing up like his father."

"I was his mother," Julia reminded him.

"I've heard that, too!" Anger, swift and dark, rode the old man's face. He rose and towered, though he was four inches shorter than she.

"For years I heard that. And I wasn't strong enough to defeat it. So now this thing starts all over again. Here's another McFarlane wearing the uniform of his country and wearing no honor with it."

Julia smiled dryly, without mirth. "Do I hear a big wind blowing? Who hid the switches, I'd like to know, when he was little, when I'd cut stout ones and laid down the law? Who sneaked upstairs with suckers and gingerbread? You needn't roar, John I, I know you like a book."

"Dooley," he said grimly, "no matter what you say, I'm going to court next term and file that paper. I've listened to you long enough. You've got a right to a life of your own, and I'm going to see that you have it."

Julia's face drained swiftly, and out of the whiteness her eyes were embers.

"No. No, John I, I won't let you do it."

He twisted his mouth. "You can't stop me if I want to do it."

Julia's voice came, hoarse and thin. "I think I can stop you. And I will!"

"He's been gone twenty-five years. If he were legally dead, everything would be cleared up. You're a fool—a weak, sentimental fool!"

"All right," she sighed, "I'm a fool. Leave it like that, John I."

She walked away, setting her boots down firmly.

John I. watched her go, frowning. A beautiful woman, a fine woman, too good for that worthless man she had married, the man who had been his own son.

"I'll do it anyway!" he said aloud. Then he leaned back and thumbed tobacco into his pipe.

Dave Patterson rode his horse slowly across the great dam. On his right the power lake slept, silvery and flat under the stars, a skittish young bass flinging himself as an offering to the frail platinum moon and falling back to mint great coins of shadowy quicksilver.

A Remarkable

Woman Is Julia

At the lower end of the lane young pigs got up and skittered away hysterically when the horse snorted at them. Every fence post glistened white, and beyond the wire the dew shone on rectangular roofs of rows of low houses. The homely farm smell was definite now, the mixture of pigs and hay and froggy cattle-pond that gave Dave a feeling of nostalgia. A naked bulb burned above a gate, shadowed by dark old trees, and Dave got down and tied his horse, opened the gate and passing through closed it carefully, walking across the shorn, quiet grass to the house.

Behind high windows soft lights glowed, and the house itself loomed starkly white under the aged trees. Dave remembered the way it had looked not so long ago. Old and faded, the mortar melting sadly from between the tired bricks, a little shelf of a porch with spindly railings sagging. Now it was pillared and restored and proud, with a sweep of drive between ivied stone posts and the fanlight above the door gleaming.

Julia McFarlane had done all that. Born a McFarlane and married to a distant cousin of the same name, she had dragged the old place back from desuetude alone, except for the fumbling, peppery encouragement of old John I. McFarlane. Julia was slender and calm and merry, but indomitable with it, and for a long time, longer than he liked to reckon, Dave Patterson knew that he had been in love with her.

Not that he had let her know. To Dooley he was good old Dave, whose farm and handsome old brick house had been swallowed up by the encroaching power project, who was a bit bewildered now, uprooted from the land that Pattersons had farmed for generations, trying to find himself again by running a bank and not being very happy at it. He was forty-seven and thinning on top, and one knee was stiff so the army would not have him, and his first wife had been dead for so long that her memory had faded to a small, silvery shadow.

"I could get lost mighty easy in these hills."

He crossed the porch and opened a french door without knocking, and instantly a young man in the tan breeches and olive-drab blouse of the Air Corps, with a silver bar on his shoulder, jumped to his feet. A dark young man, his hair cut short and disciplined with difficulty, with a good pair of honest blue eyes.

"Hello," Dave said, "I thought you were Ric at first. I thought he must have got his shoulder-warden mighty quick."

"How do you do, sir?" The soldier showed very white teeth in a quick smile. "I'm Spencer Gordon. I used to be a friend of Ric's—before the war."

When Old Friends
Get Together

"Before you got those?" Dave grinned and indicated the silver bars. "Now, no friendship with men in the ranks, eh? Old military protocol. I'm Dave Patterson. Lived on the next place till the TVA drowned me out. So you're in the air, are you?"

"Not now. They prouder me for a while to teach aerodynamics in T.S.—that's technical school, sir. But I have my wings, and I hope to be back in the air before long."

"I assume you're here to see Jill?"

"Yes," Young Gordon flushed. "I met Jill at Ridley Field two weeks ago, but Ric and I were in college together. Seems like a century ago. We're going to some dance, I think."

"Met Jill's mother yet?"

"Yes, sir, she's upstairs helping Jill dress. I met the grandfather, too. He's out somewhere now tending a sick pig."

"A sick pig is a catastrophe on this place. The McFarlanes raise the finest hogs in Tennessee."

"My people were farmers, too, Mississippi. Cotton mostly. But my father and mother died when I was very young."

"What's Ric doing now?" Dave asked. "Is he going to try for the cadet corps?"

"He washed out, I think—some minor point or other. Now he's trying for officer's school, so I hear. I don't see him often. That's a big post down there, and you rarely hear much about a man unless he's in your own squadron." Young Gordon stopped abruptly as heels clicked on the polished stairs.

In the big mirror in the hall Dave could see the reflection of Jill coming down.

She paused at the door, and Dave saw the young lieutenant's throat twitch and his eyes glow as he sprang to his feet. Jill was the prettiest thing alive, Dave decided—but not beautiful as Julia was.

Jill said, "Hello, Dave. I didn't hear you come in. I thought Spang was down here alone hating me for being so slow."

"Are you Spang?" Dave asked. "I'm Spang. They hung that on me at college. You'll excuse us, sir, if we take off?"

Jill said, "We have to drive the station-wagon. It has plenty of B gas in it, but Dooley says to remember that the tires have to last all winter."

Spang took her elbow with a proud, proprietary air. "Good night, sir. Glad to have seen you."

"You look very decorative, you two," Dave approved. "The military is at its best with something fluffy alongside."

"More pleasing to the eye, no doubt," Spang amended, "but not quite so effective as an oxygen mask and parachute. I hope you know where this dance is. Remember I'm a country boy from down the Delta. I could get lost mighty easy in these hills."

"Jill knows every hill," Dave told him.

"I should! I've hunted chinquapins on them and got chiggers on practically all of them."

"Have fun, kids," Dave went through the hall to the foot of the stairs. There he intoned in a firm, carrying voice, "I could just sit here and talk to myself. Or I could go home. Oh, hello, Dooley. I thought maybe you'd gone to bed."

Julia leaned over the banister. "At nine o'clock? I don't do that any more. I wake up at two a.m. and think too much. I'll be down in a minute."

She came presently, trailing a flowered chintz housegown. Her hair was roughened, her eyes looked a little shadowed. "This is my sixth change of costume for today," she sighed as she dropped into a chair.

"When are you going to ease off this strenuous business? And what you need is a drink."

"Not tonight, Dave. It stimulates me too much. I can't sleep. But fix one for yourself—and you can make one for John I, too. He'll be in presently. No ice for him—he hates having it bump against his mustache. As for this strenuous life, it won't be over soon, I fear. They put Foster's boy into One A today. I argued that he was essential, that we had to raise food for our army, but old Mr. Corbett—you know how pig-headed he is and always stiff with the letter of the law—asked me if I wanted to keep this farm for my children or let the Nazis have it."

Dave went to the kitchen, came back presently with two tall glasses.

"So you revised your decision about letting Jill run around with the army?" he said.

"What can I do, Dave? She's a grown woman. I can't put her in a convent. She has to have fun. She's twenty-six years old. Sounds incredible, doesn't it? The span between two wars. Richard's last leave before he went over, and I was so young and so heart-torn and so terribly in love and so unhappy with it. I can't believe that that agonized, nineteen-year-old thing was I! Two babies, and no home, no husband, nothing—till you came and found me, and John I. brought me back here. I don't want anything like that for Jill. I don't want that loneliness for her, sitting at home, watching the mail, waiting, freezing with dread every time a messenger comes down the street. And I don't want her to have what I've had for twenty-five years—silence! Not even to know, not to be certain whether it was quite right either to grieve or to be resigned. But what can I do?"

"Nothing," Dave agreed. "We can't live other people's lives for them. No matter how much we love them. I'd like to live your life differently, if I could."

"But I like my life. What's wrong with it?"

"It's empty. Oh, I know what you're going to say. You've crowded it full of work and responsibility. You've raised Ric and Jill, and taken care of John I. and a few hundred pigs. You've made this farm a success, but what does it get you, Dooley—you, personally?"

"It gets me just that, Dave. Success. What else is there—what else beside accomplishment? Work that is of value, to me and to the world. What else is there?"

"Dave Has His Little Secret"

Dave could have said, "There's love, Dooley." But he knew he would not say it. Sometimes he was certain, wearily, that he would never say it.

He had loved Dooley for so long but even now, after a span of 25 uncertain years he had never mentioned it to her because he knew instinctively she would have drawn herself into a shell and their friendship, which had come to mean so much to both of them, would have become strained, possibly even ended.

He said, "Sometimes I think you're a wonderful woman, Dooley. And then there are times when I'm convinced that you're a sentimental idiot. Twenty-five years and not a word, and still you won't give up."

Eggs and Tuna
Here's a way to combine hard cooked eggs and tuna fish. Add three-fourths cup flaked cooked tuna fish to the flour shortening mixture of a standard drop baking powder biscuit recipe. Then top the savory golden brown biscuits with a mustard flavored white sauce studded with hard cooked eggs.
